Mr. Manogue Receives the Congratulations of His Friends Today.

Mr. Hutchins' Supporters Say There Was No Controversy-Mr. Manogue's Intentions as to the Office.

Coming so closely upon the selection of Kansas colored man for an important federal office in the District of Columbia, the nomination yesterday of Mr. William H. Manogue to be collector of customs of the port of Georgetown, announced in The Star, occasioned general gratification among the District democrats, among whom the appointee has occupied an unquestioned place as a leader. Mr. Manogue was strongly backed for the place, among his stanch friends being Commissioner Ross, Mr. Henry E. Davis and other prominent party men. It was denied today that there had been anything amounting to a factional fight between Mr. Manogue's friends and those of Mr. Wm. A. Hutchins. It has been said that Mr. Davis and Mr. James L. Norris had locked horns over the collectorship, Mr. Norris backing Mr. Hutchins, and that Mr. Manogue's appointment was a defeat for the latter member of the national demo-

Mr. Norris Says It Was Imaginary. Mr. Norris smiled this morning when asked about the alleged contest. "Any fight between anybody else and myself over the Georgetown collectorship is entirely imaginary," he remarked. "The facts of the case are that away last October, before I left the city for the world's fair and Texas, I saw Secretary Carlisle in regard to the Georgetown custom house, and asked him, in case he appointed a resident of Georgetown, to select Mr. Hutchins, and, in case he wanted a Washington man, to appoint Mr. Harrison Johnson. He asked me to put the recommendations in writing, which I did, and presented them to him. Since then I have seen him once in relation. which I did, and presented them to him. Since then I have seen him once in relation to the affair. The fact is, I don't believe Mr. Hutchins ever filed the necessary application for the office. It's all bosh to talk about a factional or any other kind of a fight in connection with the office. I am sure the entire District democracy will be well satisfied with Mr. Manogue's appointment."

Mr. Wm. A. Hutchins told The Star refied with Mr. Manogue's appointment."
Mr. Wm. A. Hutchins told The Star reporter that he had never filed an application for the position, nor was there any petition presented in his behalf at the treasury. His friends had kindly urged his appointment upon the Secretary, and he had been in their Congratulating the Appointee. The new appointee held a regular levee this morning in his office on the third floor of the police headquarters building. "I was assured some time ago that my appointment to the collectorship had been decided upon, and since then I have given the matter no attention," said Mr. Manogue several shapes as the representative of The Star drew him a side from a group of congratulating friends. "I know nothing about the office and have never been inside of the custom house, but I assure you I will give my undivided attention to it, to the exclusion of all other business, as soon as I enter upon its duties."

"Will you fill the places with democrats?"

its duties."

"Will you fill the places with democrats?"
inquired The Star man.

Mr. Manogue did not answer immediately.

"I know nothing about the personnel of the office," he said after a moment's reflection. "I know none of the employes and don't know whether they are democrats or republicans. Of course, I am a democrat and shall appoint democrats in accordance with the best interests of the public service." Mr. Manogue chatted pleasantly about his intentions regarding the custom house. "It will be my endeavor and aim," he remarked, "to make the office a convenience remarked, "to make the office a convenience to the importers of Washington, and no pains will be spared to accommodate them. I believe it will be possible to save business men the long trip over to Georgetown by having deputies call at their places of business and transact there any matters in which they may be interested. I believe it is possible to largely increase the business of the custom house and shall certainly exert every effort to accomplish this. At any rate the office will be conducted with a view to accommodating those persons who may have business with it, and importers will soon recognize, I hope, that it porters will soon recognize, I hope, that it will be to their interests to have their importations sent directly in bond to Georgetown, rather than to New York, as is the custom of many at present.

Mr. Johnson Not Pleased. Capt, Sherman A. Johnson of the port of Georgetown, who is to be succeeded by Mr. W. H. Manogue, was naturally not in a "picnic humor" when The Star reporter dropped in on him this afternoon dropped in on him this afternoon.

The appointment of a successor before he had served out the usual four-year term was an act that highly displeased the captain. He said his commission, given him by President Harrison, was a four-year one and he had expected to hold the office for that time. He had committed no misdemeanor, no charges had been levied against him. Secretary Carlisle's letter, therefore, asking for his resignation surprised him greatly. In a return communication he asked the Secretary what was the cause of his request. The Secretary had pigeonholed the letter and paid no attention to it.

The collectorship, he said, did not pay as well now as formerly, though in 1858 it paid better than the previous year. The captain started to utter, as his jerky conversation indicated, what no doubt would versation indicated, what no doubt have been sharp language against some-one, but he checked himself and said that no paper in the city would publish what he would like to say, so that he would be wastwould like to say, so that he would be wasting time in saying it.

What his future intentions were he would not say for publication. He had not looked over the books of the office, he said, to see how his commissions had compared with those of his predecessor.

RELD FOR THE GRAND JURY. Men Who Claimed to Stand in With

The hearing in the conspiracy case of William H. Thomas and George W. Boggins, colored, as printed in yesterday's Star, was concluded in the Police Court late in the afternoon. As printed yesterday, Alexander Peterson, colored, was the prosecuting witness, and it was charged that the men conspired to defraud him of $100 by pretending that, although they had a good liquor case against him, they stood in with the police and he would not be injured. Sergeant Daley, whose name was frequently mentioned in connection with the case, appeared on the stand and told of his having employed the defendants to procure evidence against "speak easies." He gave Thomas money and started him out on his mission as a "spotter" or "informer." He denied being a party to the alleged bribery transaction.

Defendant Boggins said he had been in Defendant Boggins said he had been in Peterson's and purchased strong drink, but upon the question of being an informer, he assumed an air of innocence and raid he went there after church and got a drink because he did not feel well.

But Thomas told an entirely different story. He had attempted to get evidence against Peterson and knew that such was the intention of Boggins. Thomas, however, falled, for he was refused drinks. The court heard other evidence, and after arguments heard other evidence, and after arguments on both sides held the defendants in $500 security to await the action of the grand jury.
